Description Information

Who are you trying to contact? The White House and President Obama

Subject Environment

Description for the past month citizens of 9 counties of west virginia have not been able to drink their tap water due to chemical contamination. after 2 weeks most of us were given the all clear to flush our water and were told that it was safe to use. since that time we have been given mixed messages. we were told that pregnant women should not drink the water, but that the water was safe for baby formula; then we were told that another chemical was discovered in the water. adding to the confusion, we have been told that our water now contains a good quantity of a known carcinogen. during this crisis, water distribution has been scarce. for the most part families have to purchase their water, or stand in line for protracted periods of time. schools have been closed for countless days. the economic impact is incalculable. this is a natural disaster affecting the most elemental substance--our drinking water. Just as critical is the loss of confidence in the company involved, the utility, local officials and the federal government. What can the White House do to restore the confidence of west virginians...confidence that the nation cares about our water crisis?
